SECRET OF THE TOMB REVEALED.

TUTANKHAMEN FOUND.

ROYAL SARCOPHAGUS IN SHRINE OF BLUE AND GOLD.

SPLENDID TREASURES.

MAUSOLEUM WITH DECORATED WALLS AND MORE FURNISHED CHAMBERS.

The lower chamber of Tutankhamen's tomb was opened yesterday with marvellous results.

Tutankhamen's sarcophagus was found in a splendid mausoleum, in a wonderful shrine of gold and blue.

The walls of this sepulchre are elaborately decorated, and it contains in addition to the chief mausoleum shrines of great beauty.

Other chambers were also discovered, containing a multitude of splendid treasures, including priceless jewels in the shrine of the King standing on lions' paws.

The sarcophagus was found to be unopened, and there seems no reason to doubt that inside will be found the mummy of the King.

THRILLS OF THE DISCOVERY.

By Special Correspondent.

LONDON, Today.

The great expedition led by Mr. Henry Peabody with a score of archaeologists and workmen from the United States has discovered in the vast desert near the southern end of the Nile a magnificent tomb of the ancient Pharaoh, Tutankhamen.

Mr. Peabody, who has been working for the past two years on the site of the tomb, was present during the opening of the sepulchre.

"We were thrilled," said Mr. Peabody, "when we first saw the beautifully decorated shrine of the sarcophagus.

"The walls of the shrine are covered with representations of the Pharaoh standing on lions' paws, and the sarcophagus itself is a mass of gold and blue.

"The mummy of Tutankhamen was found inside the sarcophagus, perfectly preserved, and in a state of great beauty.

"The treasures inside the tomb are beyond anything we have ever seen before.

"We have discovered a vast collection of gold and silver vessels, precious jewels, and other objects of great value.

"The discovery of the tomb is of the greatest importance, and will add greatly to our knowledge of ancient Egypt.
